CITY OF HAMMOND ISSUES NEW VACCINE REQUIREMENTS

Mayor Thomas M. McDermott, Jr. has issued two executive orders that require proof of vaccination to begin employment with the City of Hammond and before any current employee transfers or is promoted.

"As the federal government and OSHA continue to work on implementing a vaccine order for employers with over 100 people, I want to make sure the City of Hammond is both preparing itself and also taking pro-active steps to require proof of vaccinations where I feel appropriate," said Mayor McDermott.

The OSHA Emergency Temporary Standard (ETS) that would have required all employers with over 100 employees to require vaccination has been stayed by the 5th Circuit Court of Appeals. OSHA has stopped implementation work of the ETS so there is no clear direction by the federal government at this time of this requirement.

"I've let my department heads know that even though the OSHA requirement appears to be off the table temporarily that something will be coming down the road, it is my strong recommendation to get vaccinated. If there is a requirement implemented and people aren't vaccinated, there is a great job market out there and people are free to work elsewhere," said the mayor.

Mayor McDermott signed two Executive Orders this week concerning vaccinations. The first requires proof of vaccination for all new hires (including part time and seasonal workers) as a pre-condition to employment with the City of Hammond. The second requires proof of vaccination as a condition for any transfer or promotion within the City of Hammond for all employees not covered by a collective bargaining agreement that would mandate promotion based upon time on the job. "I continue to believe that vaccination is the best way to combat COVID-19, to stop the spread, and to get ahead of any surge in our community. I'm going to do what I can to protect our employees and residents by implementing these Executive Orders," said Mayor McDermott.

ceremony for United Hospital Services at 1335 Huehn Street in Hammond, Indiana. As Indiana's largest healthcare laundry service company, Indianapolis-based UHS chose Hammond as home for its second facility because of its great location and friendly business climate. "The city of Hammond welcomes UHS and its commitment to investing in Hammond, especially in the healthcare sector," said Mayor McDermott. "Hammond is pleased to welcome UHS to its business community and help them grow and expand in the years to come."

Rosa Parks ignites bus boycott

1955 December 01 In Montgomery, Alabama, Rosa Parks is jailed for refusing to give up her seat on a public bus to a white man, a violation of the city's racial segregation laws. The successful Montgomery Bus Boycott, organized by a young Baptist minister named Martin Luther King, Jr., followed Park's historic act of civil disobedience.

"The mother of the civil rights movement," as Rosa Parks is known, was born in Tuskegee, Alabama, in 1913. She worked as a seamstress and in 1943 joined the Montgomery chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP).

According to a Montgomery city ordinance in 1955, African Americans were required to sit at the back of public buses and were also obligated to give up those seats to white riders if the front of the bus filled up. Parks was in the first row of the Black section when the white driver demanded that she give up her seat to a white man. Parks' refusal was spontaneous but was not merely brought on by her tired feet, as is the popular legend. In fact, local civil rights leaders had been planning a challenge to Montgomery's racist bus laws for several months, and Parks had been privy to this discussion.

Learning of Parks' arrest, the NAACP and other African American activists immediately called for a bus boycott to be held by Black citizens on Monday, December 5. Word was spread by fliers, and activists formed the Montgomery Improvement Association to organize the protest. The first day of the bus boycott was a great success, and that night the 26-year-old

Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr., told a large crowd gathered at a church, "The great glory of American democracy is the right to protest for right." King emerged as the leader of the bus boycott and received numerous death threats from opponents of integration. At one point, his home was bombed, but he and his family escaped bodily harm.

The boycott stretched on for more than a year, and participants carpooled or walked miles to work and school when no other means were possible. As African Americans previously constituted 70 percent of the Montgomery bus ridership, the municipal transit system suffered gravely during the boycott. On November 13, 1956, the U.S. Supreme Court struck down Alabama state and Montgomery city bus segregation laws as being in violation of the equal protection clause of the 14th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution. On December 20, King issued the following statement: "The year old protest against city buses is officially called off, and the Negro citizens of Montgomery are urged to return to the buses tomorrow morning on a non-segregated basis." The boycott ended the next day. Rosa Parks was among the first to ride the newly desegregated buses.

Martin Luther King, Jr., and his nonviolent civil rights movement had won its first great victory. There would be many more to come.

Rosa Parks died on October 24, 2005. Three days later the U.S. Senate passed a resolution to honor Parks by allowing her body to lie in honor in the U.S. Capitol Rotunda.

Purdue University Northwest welcomed into the University Sales Center Alliance

The White Lodging Professional Selling Lab at Purdue University Northwest is a high-tech sales lab where students develop confidence and hands-on skills in the sales minor program.

Purdue University Northwest (PNW) has been accepted as an associate member of the University Sales Center Alliance (USCA), one of only 62 universities in the United States and Europe to be part of the organization.

"This is THE sales organization to be a part of," said Claudia C. Mich, director of PNW's Professional Selling Program. "It consists of the top sales educational programs across the country. Our acceptance into the USCA raises the visibility of Purdue Northwest's sales program in the community and also with national and international companies."

PNW launched the sales minor program in 2016. The curriculum is designed to develop skills that students need in a 21st century workplace through exposure to real world selling situations. The program trains students in relationship building, sales planning, needs assessment, customized product presentations, handling objections, effectively listening and closing, as well as other sales-focused skill sets. Also part of the successful sales program is the White Lodging Professional Selling Lab. The lab is a high-tech central classroom with six practice suites used for role-play training. The role-play scenarios help students develop confidence and hands-on skills in sales. A sales engineering minor program was introduced in 2021.

The USCA, a consortium of university sales centers and educators, is dedicated to continuing the advancement of the sales profession through teaching, research and outreach. The USCA sets and monitors sales program standards while sharing best practices, enhancing sales curricula and ultimately preparing students for a career in sales.

One advantage of associate membership in the USCA is the mentorship program. "I'm really looking forward to having that mentor to help us grow," said Mich. "The support we will receive as an associate member will help us continue to expand and grow our sales program. The new insights and ideas we will receive from all the peer institutions' top sales and education programs across the country will be invaluable."

Ultimately, it's the PNW sales student who will benefit from the membership. "The Purdue Northwest sales program builds self-efficacy and confidence in our students," said Mich. "Our acceptance into the USCA ensures our students are receiving a rich, engaging, top-level education in the sales profession."
