First Japanese player makes MLB debut

On September 1, 1964, pitcher Masanori Murakami becomes the first Japanese man to play in U.S. baseball's major leagues. Murakami pitched a scoreless eighth inning for the San Francisco Giants in a 4-1 loss to the New York Mets in front of 39,379 fans at Shea Stadium.

Murakami was a teenage baseball prodigy in Japan. In 1962, he signed with Nippon Professional Baseball's Nankai Hawks while still in high school. After pitching a year in the minors, Murakami made his major league debut with the Hawks at just 19 years old. In 1964, the Hawks sent Murakami to the United States to pitch in the minor leagues for the San Francisco Giants as part of an exchange program. Murakami's left-handed sidearm delivery proved an asset in the United States, where deceptive pitching still isn't as common as in Japan. Murakami began his American career with an 11-7 record as a reliever with Fresno in the Class A California League. On September 1, he was ordered to report to the bigs and handed a plane ticket to New York. After arrival, he quickly signed a contract (explained by an interpreter since he spoke no English) and then headed to the bullpen.

Murakami's arrival came just as the Giants, including star outfielders Willie Mays and Willie McCovey, was chasing the Philadelphia Phillies for the National League pennant. Meanwhile, the Mets, the Giants' opponent on September 1, were in the midst of the third losing season in their three-year history. Murakami entered the game in relief in the eighth inning, and began with a strikeout of Met leftfielder Charlie Smith, before yielding a single to Chris Cannizaro. He then settled down, and struck out first baseman Ed Kranepool and shortstop Billy McMillan consecutively to complete his first inning in the major leagues. The Mets, however, proved a difficult opponent: Pitcher Al Jackson pitched a complete game, giving up just six hits and one walk to lead the Mets to a 4-1 victory.

In the end, Murakami's first year in the majors proved a rousing success, with nine appearances and a 1.80 ERA, good for a 1-0 record with one save. After the 1964 season the Nankai Hawks asked Murakami to return to Japan, but the Giants refused on the grounds they had Murakami under contract. The Japanese baseball commissioner intervened, negotiating a compromise. Murakami spent 1965 with the Giants, going 4-1 with a 3.75 ERA and eight saves in 45 relief appearances. In 1966, he returned to Japan, where he went on to pitch for another 18 seasons.

The next Japanese player to join Major League Baseball was pitcher Hideo Nomo, who made his debut in 1995, more than 30 years after the trailblazing Masanori Murakami.

City of Hammond Employee Spotlight!

Meet Ronald Novak, Director of the City of Hammond's Department of Environmental Management.

Mr. Novak began working for the City of Hammond on July 1st, 1971, and has dedicated 55 years to serving the Hammond community and helping maintain a cleaner, safer, and healthier environment for residents.

As Director of Environmental Management, Mr. Novak works diligently to address air pollution, noise pollution, and other environmental concerns affecting our city and its residents. Using his unmatched experience and deep care for the Region's natural environment and community members, Mr. Novak helps Hammond reclaim and preserve its natural spaces so residents can safely enjoy them. He does this by conducting investigations, overseeing testing, and helping determine the most effective solutions. He also connects residents with the appropriate local, state, and federal departments that can provide needed resources and assistance.

While taking his portrait, Mr. Novak stated that he keeps a diagram of Lost Marsh Golf Course displayed behind him during virtual meetings because he is especially proud of his contributions to the course's development and the natural beauty it showcases. He also shared: "Every day is a challenge because of the different issues that arise; however, I am committed to doing my best to solve those issues as expeditiously as possible."

Thank you, Mr. Novak, for 55 years of incredible service and for your continued commitment to protecting Hammond's residents and environment! Your knowledge, dedication, and lasting contributions to the city are truly appreciated. Show Mr. Novak some love on our Go Hammond social media pages, and stay tuned for next Friday's City of Hammond Employee Spotlight!

Sinai Forum at Purdue Northwest 2026

The Sinai Forum at Purdue University Northwest (PNW) announced the lineup of five notable speakers who will join its 2026 season.

"As Purdue University Northwest joins the nation in commemorating America's 250th anniversary, the Sinai Forum invites our community to be part of conversations that offer perspective, inspire thoughtful reflection and help us better understand both the challenges of our time and the values that continue to bring us together," said Leslie Plesac, executive director of the Sinai Forum at Purdue Northwest.

Audiences can expect engaging programs with five knowledgeable, nationally recognized voices exploring American democracy, the future of the Supreme Court, medical innovation, personal resilience and the enduring traditions that bring communities together.

Jon Meacham, a Pulitzer Prize-winning presidential historian, opens the 2026 season on Sept. 13. His program,

"Hope Through History: How to Survive Turbulent Times," draws from his latest book to examine the tension between America's ideals and its divisions. Meacham reminds audiences that history is both a record of the past and a valuable guide for the future.

Pat Hughes, who will speak on Dec. 6, is a beloved and respected sports broadcaster and a recipient of the Ford C. Frick Award from the National Baseball Hall of Fame and Museum. For over four decades he has connected generations of fans through storytelling in sports, helping create memories, tradition and the enduring power of shared experiences.

The 2026 season will also feature an illuminating conversation with award-winning attorney and former Acting Solicitor General Neal Katyal on decisions and constitutional questions raised by the U.S. Supreme Court; a look at innovation and hope in medicine with Dr. David Fajgenbaum, a physician-scientist who has devoted his career to helping discover life-saving treatments worldwide; and John O'Leary's inspiring personal story of adversity and resilience while recovering from a severe childhood accident.

Program tickets, as well as dates, times, full program descriptions, speaker biographies and sponsor information are available at pnw.edu/sinai-forum. College and high school students can attend programs for free by registering on the Sinai Forum at Purdue Northwest website and presenting their student IDs at the program check-in.

All 2026 Sinai Forum at Purdue Northwest programs will be hosted at the James B. Dworkin Student Services and Activities Complex (DSAC) on the PNW Westville campus, 1401 S. U.S. 421, Westville, Ind. Programs begin promptly at 4 p.m. CDT, with doors opening to all ticketholders at 3 p.m.

Since 1953, over 350 speakers have engaged and inspired audiences through the forum. Visit pnw.edu/sinai-forum for more details.

What Should You Do Before a Flood?

Understand Your Flood Risk

Learn about the types of flooding that can impact your home and community. Types of flooding include flash floods, river floods, storm surges, coastal floods, burn scars, debris flows, ice/debris jams, snowmelt, dry wash, dam breaks, and levee failures.

- Reach out to your local office of emergency management for advice.
- Know your home and community's flood risk. Visit the FEMA Flood Map Service Center and search for your home using your address.

Make Plans to Stay Safe

- Flash floods can be sudden and violent. You may have little to no warning. Designate a place on higher ground that you can get to quickly. Plan to move to higher ground before flooding begins.
- River floods: Know if you are in an area that is prone to river floods. Review your evacuation plan so that you can leave quickly if officials advise you to evacuate.
- Storm surge: Be prepared to evacuate immediately if local officials advise. A storm surge can cause water levels to rise quickly and flood large areas in just minutes.
- Coastal flooding: Be prepared to evacuate immediately if local officials advise. Move inland before flooding begins.

Flood Preparedness Checklist

Flooding is a temporary overflow of water onto land that is normally dry. Floods can result from rain, snow, coastal storms, storm surges, overflows of rivers, and dam failure. Floods can be dangerous.

People die by drowning when they don't evacuate before floodwaters come or when they enter floodwaters. Floods can damage buildings and roads, cause power outages, and create landslides. Floodwaters carry waste and pollute drinking water. Flooding can develop slowly or quickly. Flash floods can be sudden and violent. Climate change increases our risk of many types of flooding. But we can take action to prepare. Prepare now to protect yourself and your loved ones

What to Do: During

Turn Around! Don't Drown!

- Never walk, swim, or drive through floodwater. Just 6 in (15 cm) of fast-moving floodwater can knock you over, and 12 in (30 cm) can carry your vehicle away.

What to Do After

Prevent Injuries

- Understand the dangers you may face and keep your loved ones safe.
- If you evacuated, wait for officials to say it is safe before going home.
- Avoid fallen power lines, poles, and wires. They can electrocute you.
- Watch out for falling trees and other debris.
- Use flashlights or battery-powered lanterns, rather than candles, to reduce fire risk.
- Many injuries happen during cleanup. Wear protective equipment, like boots, long pants, work gloves, eyewear, and an N95 respirator to protect your lungs. Follow the advice of local public health officials.
- Learn how to use equipment safely. Do not touch electrical equipment if it is wet or if you are standing in water because you could get electrocuted.
- Cleaning up is a big job. Take care of yourself. Work with a partner and take frequent breaks.

Protect Your Health

- Flooding can contaminate drinking water. Check with your local public health department about drinking water safety.
- Don't get sick from eating spoiled food. Throw out food that got wet or warm. When in doubt, throw it out!
- Stay away from floodwaters. They may contain sewage, sharp items, and chemicals that can make you ill.
- If your home was flooded: If possible, dry your home and everything in it as quickly as you can within 24 to 48 hours. If you cannot return to dry your home within 24 to 48 hours, you should assume you have mold growth. When it is safe to return home, completely dry everything, clean up the mold and make sure you don't still have a moisture problem.
- Keep wet areas well-ventilated. Throw away wet materials that can't be repaired or dried.
- Prevent carbon monoxide poisoning. Gasoline, propane, natural gas, or charcoal-burning devices should never be used inside a home, basement, garage, tent, or camper – or even outside near an open window. Carbon monoxide can't be seen or smelled, but it can kill you fast. If you start to feel sick, dizzy, or weak, get to fresh air right away – do not delay.

Take Care of Yourself

- It's normal to have a lot of bad feelings, stress or anxiety.
- Eat healthy food and get enough sleep to help you deal with stress.
